

To Whom It May Concern:

I have the pleasure to write this letter in recommendation of Adam Frankenfeld. I have known Adam for three years as an undergraduate media student at Trinity Christian College. He has taken my classes in video production and webcasting among others. During that time I have seen tremendous growth not only in his media skills, but also as a leader and a collaborator. Adam not only excels in his academic work, but does so with creativity, talent and professionalism, three traits that will lead to success beyond the walls of Trinity. Adam has planned, produced and directed multiple projects related to my classes, but also has had the ambition to work on large scale projects outside of school as well, most recently launching his own game design business. This past Spring Adam shone as both an entertaining on-air talent and a skilled technical director for Trinity webcasting shows.

Additionally, Adam offers intangibles for success that reach beyond the classroom and his academic work. He has an exceptional work ethic, is a reliable leader and collaborator. Most importantly, he brings a personal ethic, integrity and great enthusiasm to everything he approaches that is, frankly, quite rare and refreshing. Adam would make a fine addition to any work or academic environment, and I wholeheartedly recommend him. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any further questions or concerns.

Sincerely,
